arriving at the museum:

Outside the Museum's entrance, you will find a grotto featuring plants and a fountain.

Lockers are available for storing backpacks. If you need to bring medical supplies inside, please inform security.

Our security staff uses detection wands, bag checks, thermal scanning and metal detectors. If you or someone in your group is sensitive to these procedures, please inform staff and we will assist as needed.

ground floor

admissions
Upon arrival, you may need to wait briefly in a line to check in.

Wristbands must be worn when visiting the Museum. If your wristband is too tight or too loose, a staff member will be happy to assist you with resizing it.

information station
This is where you can ask questions and receive details about the Museum's mobile guide.

store
The Museum store offers a variety of items, some for touching and others not. Please ask staff before touching.

This area may have a short line.

theater
The theater plays a short film about Salvador Dalí. It is dimly lit and may have other guests.

café gala
The café can be loud and may have strong smells. Seats are available both inside and outside.

This area may have a crowd or a line.

dalí lives
Two digital screens allow you to interact with Dalí as he tells stories. His voice can be loud and surprising.

avant-garden

avant-garden
Noise levels can be a bit louder due to street traffic and the wind off the water.

the dalí dome

dalí alive 360°
This experience includes loud music and flashing lights. Please check with a visitor experience member to see if it's right for you.

third floor

galleries
Noise levels in this area are usually quite low. Occasionally, special exhibits may include music, lights or video.

These spaces can sometimes be crowded, so it may take a moment before you can view a painting.

Temperatures can vary, but it is typically cold in the galleries.

Audio tours are available through the Bloomberg Connects mobile guide—look for the QR code.

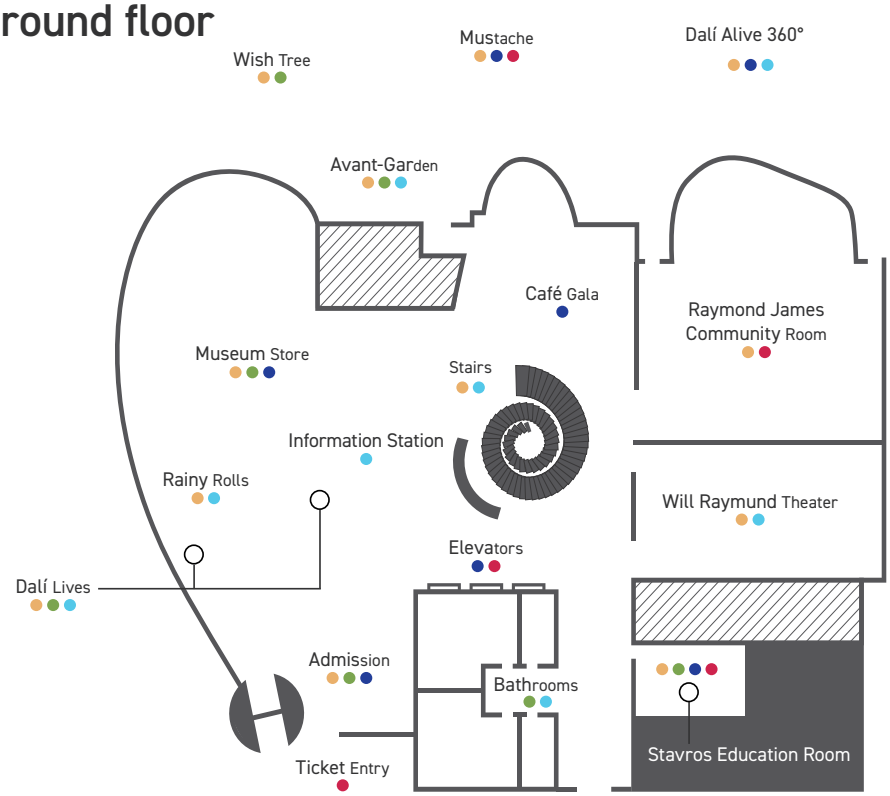
contemplation room
Inside the permanent collection, there is a quiet space to rest.

ask dalí
This experience features interactive conversations through a telephone. The voice and surrounding area may be loud.

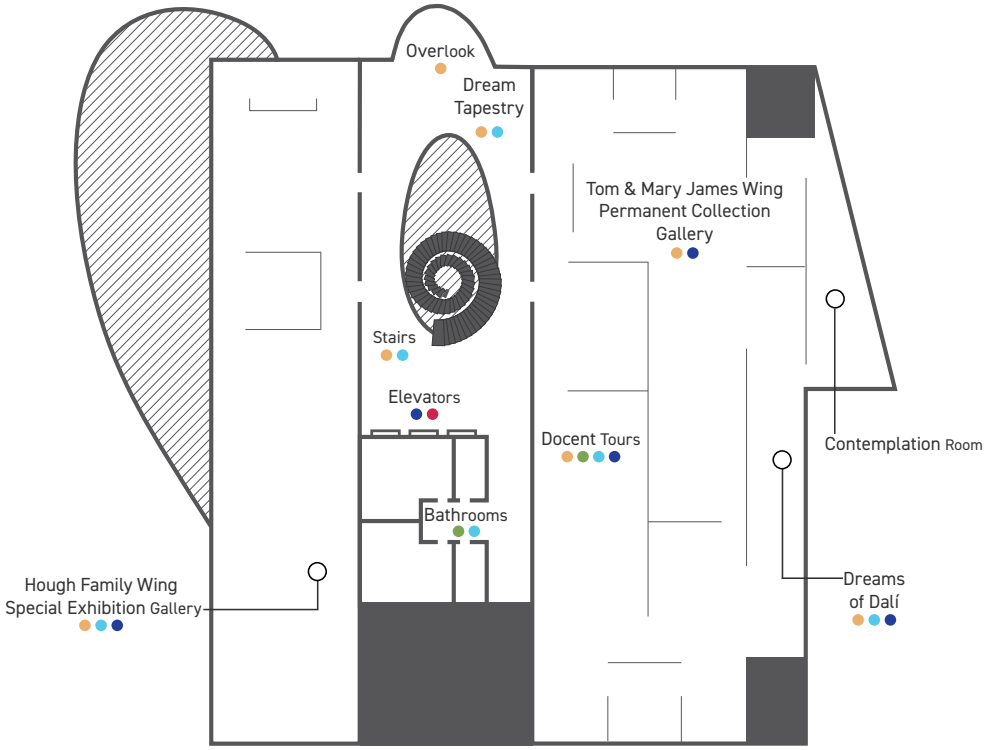
sensory map:

This map highlights sensory elements throughout The Dalí Museum, including areas with tactile, auditory and visual features to help you navigate.

ground floor



top floor



Visual

Touch

Auditory

Wait

Share